Palestine Jews Fight In Many Areas

The majority of the 1,500 Palestine Jews now serving in the Royal Air Force have been enlisted for two years or more, according to information released by the Recruiting Department of the Jewish Agency. They are stationed in 150 different places throughout the Middle East.

The Jewish members of the R.A.F. serve either in small units or individually in countries adjacent and remote from Palestine. Palestine Jews, wearing the R.A.F. blue uniform, may be found throughout Egypt, in the Libyan Desert, on the fringes of Tunisia, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Sudan, Kenya, and nearer home in Syria, Iraq, Cyprus, and Aden. Jewish R.A.F. air-men have distinguished themselves in the campaigns of the air force in Greece, Crete, in Ethiopia, Italian East Africa and in Syria. A number of them ave been decorated for bravery and distinguished service.

Members of the Palestine police force, comprising Jews, Englishmen and Arbs, have been "lent" to the British military administration in Tripolitania for the purpose of organizing and training the constabulary in Italy's former North African empire. Officers and men of the Palestine police have been instrumental in reorganizing the police forces in Libya, as well as in Eritrea, and Italian East Africa.

However, much effort is still necessary to place the industry again on a sound economic footing.

The number of American citizens residing in Palestine has dwindled from 10,800 to 2,500 since the outbreak of the war, reports the Palestine press. Many Americans in Palestine have volunteered for service in the U.S. Army.

Bodies Of 6,300 Found In Ditch In Caucasus

Revolting details of the slaughter of the entire Jewish population of Kislovodsk in the Caucasus have been given in the latest report of the Russian Extraordinary State Commission for the investigation of German atrocities.

It has been established, says the report, that on August 16, 1942, the day after the Germans occupied the town, Pohl, the Nazi Military Commandant, and Welben, Chief of the Gestapo, ordered all Jews immediately to hand over to the German Command everything they had of value including gold, silver, precious stones, carpets, linen, clothing, and 100,000 roubles in cash.

Two days later, the report continues, Pohl ordered all Jews regardless of age or sex, to register, after which they were threatened with the death penalty if they did not wear a six-pointed star on the right side of the chest. On September 9, the Jews were ordered to report at the railway with not more than 25 pounds of luggage and two day's supply of food.

Ostensibly they were to be sent to sparsely populated places in the Ukraine.

Two thousand Jews, including women, children, and aged people, assembled in the railway yard and were loaded on to 18 open railway trucks and two box cars. They were taken under strong escort to Mineralniye Vody where they were all shot in an anti-tank ditch opposite the glass works. Thousands of Jews who had been brought from Essentuki and Pyatigorsk were also shot at this place.

Nazis Trap French Jews By Thousands

The German army occupation of of the Italian zone in France, has trapped thousands of French Jews and will mean immediate death for many of them.

Two thousand French refugees have been rounded up by the Gestapo at Grenoble for deportation to Poland. Many Jews left Riviera ports in small boats, including row-boats, in an effort to gain an Allied-held port.

Large numbers of French Jews fled to the Riviera when the Germans occupied all France last fall, leaving only the narrow Mediterranean strip in the hands of Italian garrisons. Last week, an exodus from the Italian zone of France to Italy began. The refugees hoped to find safety in an Allied-ruled Italy. The German occupation of some Italian territory stranded many of them.

German troops, it is reported, have arrived in the Italian zone. Gestapo squads are tracking down Jews, groups of whom are hiding in the hills and woods. Near Grenoble, Jewish fugitives assisted French guerrillas in routing German searching parties.

A few hundred Jews reached Milan in recent days, where they were sheltered by Jewish relief organizations.

Polish Fascist Paper Re-Appears In Britain

The London [illegible] reports that [illegible] paper [illegible] pages of the old edition.

The paper deals with a variety of problems, all of which are treated from the reactionary, ultra-nationalist, Fascist angle. On every page there are violent criticisms of various members of the present Polish Government.

A long article is devoted to a tribute to Piasecki, the founder of the Polish militant anti-Semitic movement and the editor of Prosto z Mostu, the most virulently racialist paper in Warsaw before the war. M. Mikolajczyk, the Premier, and Prof. Kot, the Minister of Information, are violently attacked, while Father Kaczynski, the Minister of Education, is accused of having "Judaised" a recent Congress of Polish Catholics.

The paper demands that the Government should include Bielecki Endeks as well as Pilsudskists. It appeals to the younger generation of Poles not to pay too much attention to the past greatness of the older generation and holds up Dmowski, the founder of the Endek party, as an example for younger Poles to follow. It was Dmowski who wrote that of all Poland's enemies, the Jews were the most dangerous.

The fact that this scurrilous paper has been able again to appear is most disturbing not only to Jews, but to democratically minded Poles. It will be recalled that in February last the then editor, Prystanciewicz was arrested by the Polish military authorities for publishing an open letter by Adam Doboszynski to the President and General Sosnkowski, attacking the Government. Doboszynski was also arrested because, as an army officer, it was contrary to regulations for him to write such a letter. He, however, was set free by a smart subterfuge. He was temporarily deprived of his rank, and so could not be tried by a Military Court. As there was no Polish Civil Court, he was released.

Poles are trying to discover the identity of the new editor, and there is much speculation. One thing seems certain. Walsa must have some very powerful "protection" from influential circles to risk reappearing, and must also have a large circulation in the army.

In May last, Brendan Bracken, the Minister of Information, uttered a warning to the editors of foreign language newspapers who attempted to stir up trouble among the United Nations. He threatened drastic action against those who abused the hospitality of this country.

Dutch Are Kind To Few Jews Left In Holland

Of the 120,000 Jews living in Holland before the war, only 6,000 were left in the middle of July, according to information reaching Dutch circles in London, England.

With the exception of ten families in Rotterdam possessing Palestine immigration certificates, all the remaining Jews were concentrated in Amsterdam, and it was expected that they would be deported shortly.

Jan de Hartog, a well-known Dutch author and leader of the Dutch underground movement, who only recently escaped from Holland, said that the devilish plan of the Nazis to exterminate Dutch Jews completely has already been carried out to a large extent. Of all the oppressive measures taken by the Germans in Holland, the persecution of the Jews is the most savage and beastly, he declared.

Mr. de Hartog described terrible scenes during the deportation of Jews from Amsterdam. Patients had been taken from operating theatres while still under anaesthetic, and even women awaiting child-birth were not spared.

The old building of the National Theatre in Amsterdam is being used as a clearing house for the deportees, Mr. de Hartog stated. The Nazis have left a few wealthy Jews unmolested and point out to the Dutch population how well off they are. The Dutch, however, Mr. de Hartog continued, are not deceived and demonstrate their sympathy with the Jews whenever possible. The few remaining Jews are frequently invited to the homes of Dutchmen.

[illegible] reported that [illegible] village down completely. At Busky near Zwierzyniec Lubelski, 340 Dutch Jews were machine-gunned, while 100 women and children were murdered near Potok in the Bilgoraj district.

By New Measure Reich Reduces Jews To Most Inferior Status

Jews in Germany have ceased to exist from the legal point of view. Acting as Germany's self-appointed "Supreme Law Lord," Adolf Hitler has opened the door to murder, writes Julie Rothschild in the New York Herald Tribune. He has ruled that the Jews no longer are under the jurisdiction of German law courts, criminal or civil. This legal non-existence means that the last vestige of protection has been taken from Jewish individuals. The Reich automatically takes over their property at death, a ruling that is bound to affect financial arrangements and interests of foreigners as well as residents.

A decree to this effect, consisting of four articles, was published in the July issue of the official "Reichsanzeiger." The first article provides for the removal of Jews from court jurisdiction to that of the police. A special jurisdiction of courts over Poles and Jews, established in September, 1941, is abolished. On the strength of the second article the property of Jews, in case of death, goes to the state. In cases considered appropriate the Reich may support non-Jewish heirs of the deceased.

In the third article the right is reserved for the Reich to apply the decree to all foreign Jews, thus expropriating rights of foreign citizens who might have claims against Jewish estates. The fourth article provides for extension of the decree's jurisdiction over the so-called protectorate, the former Czechoslovak provinces of Bohemia and Moravia.

Discussing this shameful and shameless decree in "Der Aufbau," German-language weekly published in New York, Robert M. W. Kempner, formerly Chief Legal Adviser in the Prussian Ministry of Interior, now with the University of Pennsylvania, declares that by the new measure German Jews are reduced to a status inferior to that of the slaves in ancient Rome.

Mr. Kempner says that as a result of Hitler's "capitis diminutio" (which, under Roman law, meant impairment of position before the strict law through loss of freedom) the status of German Jews is about equal to that of a stray dog. Through their removal from court jurisdiction they are deprived of the only civic right they retained during recent years. Under the new rule they may be mishandled, robbed or murdered with impunity; their case will not be brought to trial; there will be no prosecution, there will be no court files. It is left to the discretion of the police whether or not to take an interest in such a case.

There seem to be two main reasons behind the Nazi capitis diminutio of the Jews. In the first place there is supposedly the desire of Nazi officials to escape responsibility, eventually, for measures

Two Of Seven Sons In Army Win Medals

Mrs. Esther Scolnick was still weeping for joy over the surrender of Italy when a message from the War Department arrived at her home at W Belmont Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y., informing her that one of her seven sons in service had received the Air Medal for meritorious achievement.

Strengthened by these good tidings, she gave permission to her youngest son, Arnold, to join the Navy when he attains his eighteenth birthday six months hence and planned to add an eighth star to the service flags in the front window of the Scolnick home.

Not one of the Scolnik brothers took an active part in the Mediterranean campaign, but that did not detract from Mrs. Scolnik's great joy over the downfall of Italy, which she sees as a portent of the early return of her sons, who are fighting all over the world.

The medal winner, Lieutenant Nathan Scolnick, twenty-seven, was "somewhere in India" when he received the award for meritorious achievement while participating in bombardment missions totaling more than 100 hours.

Another son, Arthur, twenty-four, who is a master sergeant with the Signal Corps in Honolulu, has written his mother that he has "a few medals" which he will present to her upon his return.

Sidney, twenty-three, is a corporal in the Ordnance Department at Puerto Rico. The others have not yet gone overseas, but are training for service wherever they may be needed. They are Abraham, thirty-seven, a corporal stationed at Greenwood, Miss.; Karl, thirty-two, a private at Fort Belvoir, Va.; Harry, twenty-six, a private in the Airborne Infantry, and Robert, eighteen, who entered a United States Naval Training School only two months ago.

The Scolnicks held a family conclave before the attack on Pearl Harbor, and agreed that war was inevitable and that when it came the brothers would get into it and help to end it as soon as possible. They didn't like what was happening to their people in Russia, where the father, Louis, was born, or in Austria, where Mrs. Scolnick was born.

Because she has a weak heart, Mrs. Scolnick persuaded the boys not to enlist all at once. They compromised. Three enlisted; three waited for induction, and the seventh went in via the National Guard, of which he was a member.

Abraham is married and has a fifteen-year-old son, Joseph, who is beginning to look speculatively at the service flag in his grandparent's window; Karl is married, but has no children; Harry, Nathan was married eight months after he enlisted two years ago, during a furlough before he was sent to India.

There is still another son, Earl, thirty-four, married and the father of three children, who tried to enlist but was turned down because of an ear injury suffered while playing football.

The Scolnicks also have two daughters, Mrs. Minnie Singer and Mrs. Jean Starr. The [illegible]

Adelard Godbout And The Future Of Quebec

The provincial election which brought Adelard Godbout to power in the autumn of 1939 aroused interest in various parts of the world. It was a change of government in one province of Canada, and yet the election was commented upon in Great Britain, throughout the British Commonwealth Nations and in the United States. The name of Adelard Godbout, Quebec's new Prime Minister, [illegible] by millions who had [illegible] of him until then; [illegible] of the Liberal [illegible] was considered as an event of importance which carried beyond the boundaries of [illegible] Province.

This was not an exaggeration of the facts. True, the election was in the first place a reform of the administration of the Province by placing it in the hands of reliable leaders. But another important aspect of the election was emphasized: in this provincial election, the French Canadian people, known throughout the world as a strong minority group in Canada, were given the first opportunity to declare their stand on a world-wide issue at the time — the war. We were not surprised at this interpretation, because everyone was intensely aware of the importance of the vote cast on that day.

Brought to power by an unprecedented popular vote, Mr. Godbout took office as the chief executive in the provincial administrative [illegible], and also as the [illegible] in the war. Canadian unity had been won. Through Mr. Godbout, French Canadians had shown their readiness to do their part. The importance of the election lay in that it proved that in the Province of Quebec there was no isolationism of the kind that divided the United States at the time, making that great nation pay by the bombing of Pearl Harbour and the loss of its strategic bases in the Far East.

Three years have passed, and in that time we have learned much. In the administrative field, the Godbout government has re-enforced the financial position of the Province and re-established its credit and reputation. Those who have investments in Quebec Provincial bonds may be confident. The Province is passing successfully through a difficult war period, and the credit for this belongs to its present administration. In spite of the debt which it took over and the cost of which it must pay, the Godbout government has found the means, without increasing taxes, to encourage the development of agriculture, to aid in colonization, and to continue its road building program. The basis has been laid for a number of protective laws, strengthened by the creation of a Ministry of Social Welfare and the preparation of provincial sickness insurance. Pensions to the old, the blind, and to needy mothers have been enacted; compensation for industrial accidents, and aid to the indigent sick. The law of collective labour contract, a model of industrial legislation, guarantees the rights of labour and maintains peaceful relations between the worker and employer. Finally, the Godbout government has outlined an extensive program for the improvement of education—a necessary step for the future of the Province.

The external results of the last four years of administration may easily be witnessed. Less obvious, perhaps, is the broad influence of the policy of the Godbout government in relation to Canada as a whole, and its effects upon the position of French Canada on this side of the Atlantic.

Within Canada and in its foreign affairs, Quebec Province today enjoys considerable prestige. This has not been achieved by mere chance. The policy of the provincial government and the work of Adelard Godbout have placed us at the fore of the Dominion; while our military, economic, agricultural and industrial war effort command an important share of the total national effort, reflecting credit on the people of this Province.

Outside Canada, especially in the United States, where trade with Quebec is important, Adelard Godbout is recognized for his co-operative attitude and for that spirit of understanding which has forged the people of America into unity in time of war. His firm and unshakable opinion, his ready and energetic intervention in support of French Canada when it has been criticized across the border, have done much to correct any prejudice in the United States in regard to this Province.

Such we believe, is the long range policy of Adelard Godbout; a provincial policy, a Canadian policy, and in some respects also an international policy. It is a large scale program, and one in which we have all taken part during the past four years. It is a program to be continued on into the post-war years towards the future prosperity of the Province.

FIRST YEAR — SECOND QUARTER CENTURY

THE Test OF OUR PROGRESS

"The test of our progress is not whether we add more to the abundance of those who have much; it is whether we provide enough for those who have too little."

Franklin D. Roosevelt.

TWENTY-FIVE years of Jewish communal endeavour concluded, we now enter upon a new era.

That Quarter Century saw many and varied Jewish endeavours united under the banner of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies.

Federation recently joined with other important bodies to present the Combined Jewish Appeal. This Combined Jewish Appeal now represents the organized conscience of the Jewish community.

Now comes the true test of our progress—the first of the second twenty-five years that will tell how well the founders of Federation builded—how wise and understanding were the advocates of the Combined Jewish Appeal.

● GIVE ADEQUATELY that the need of these great causes may be met;
● GIVE PROPORTIONATELY that your sense of duty may be satisfied;
● GIVE GENEROUSLY that you may know the true joy of giving.

A Word of Warning and Advice

It always happens that when there is a shortage of a widely used article, there are those who for a cash consideration, will undertake to remedy the deficiency. Especially is this so where intoxicating beverages are involved.

The public cannot be too strongly urged to be on its guard against these individuals. From every point of view they are bad citizens and not fit associates for any self-respecting person. They flout the law themselves, but at least they know what are the legal consequences of their acts, and it is often unfortunate that these consequences are confined to Court sentences — which is not always the case with their customers.

The dangers facing the customer are more varied and numerous. Of necessity, he becomes a partner in the illegal acts and is therefore liable to criminal prosecution and punishment. This of itself should be a sufficient deterrent to any person of sense, and particularly if he wishes to retain the respect and confidence of his family, employees, and friends. Let it not be forgotten that the police are efficient and active.

From the financial point of view, these illegal transactions are only saved from being downright robbery by the acquiescence of the victims. Obviously, to compensate him for the risks he takes, the criminal seller will provide either the smallest quantity or the poorest quality — or both — that he can pass off in exchange for the highest price he can extort. Only the most foolish will deal with him, and he takes full advantage of this.

Morals and finance are, however, not the only matters for consideration. All along the trail of illegal sales are found shocking instances of damage to health, and even of death. They are an ever-present danger in these transactions, and they occur with alarming frequency.

No patron of the criminal retailer can be sure of immunity. Of course he will be told that the goods he purchases are either legally made, probably indeed that they were purchased from the Commission, or that they came from sources which ensure their proper manufacture. What else could he be told considering the price he must pay? Surely, however, even the dullest must realize that no credence can be placed in the word of a person who habitually breaks the law for profit, and who in doing so must necessarily practise deceit as part of his business.

It may be that in some few instances, Commission goods get into the hands of these cunning individuals but not nearly so often as is claimed. When however this does happen, one or both of two things occurs: the pure article is adulterated by the addition of some other liquid containing alcohol or it is reduced in strength and so made to appear larger in quantity. In either case, a ridiculous price will be charged, because of the confidence which the name of the Commission inspires.

It is much more likely that liquor illegally sold comes from an illegal source. Never at any time was it safe to consume even small quantities of the products of the moonshiner, but it is particularly dangerous to do so now. There was a time when metal and utensils and cereal grains and molasses could easily be obtained and from these, a crude sickening alcohol could be made at little cost in cash. Nowadays, however, almost every article needed to produce alcohol, even impure alcohol, is subject either to priorities, rationing, or is not available. Always the apparatus was of a makeshift nature but in some instances it was reasonably efficient. Now, efficient apparatus is virtually unobtainable with the result that present day illicit distillation strikes a new and dangerous low in quality. It should be absolutely avoided.

There are other aspects as well. Not only are Provincial and Dominion revenues defrauded, but the trade in illicit liquors keeps men employed who should be taking their share of the nation's war-work, while their products imperil the efficiency and well-being of their customers at a time when the good health of every person is of the highest national importance.

Lest any wrong impression be created, it should be stated that there is actually very little law-breaking of the nature described. There should, however, be none at all, and to this end, the co-operation of all citizens is requested.

The Quebec Liquor Commission asks consumers of alcoholic beverages to take a realistic view of the situation. Shortages in these commodities are only a part, and after all not a very important part, of the general shortages which the public is experiencing. This is a time for strict observance of laws which are made to ensure fair treatment to all. Evasion of these laws is unpatriotic as well as dangerous from every point of view.

Quarrel Over Palestine Is Disastrous At This Time

The New Republic says:

A sharp dispute has broken out between two sections of the Jewish community in the United States. The question is whether they should work for a strictly Jewish state in Palestine, or should be content to live in a state without any definite Jewish coloration. The American Council for Judaism opposes the Jewish state and the American Jewish Conference, which has been meeting in New York City, favors it.

Whatever may be the merits on either side of this question, it is a disaster that the dispute should have broken out publicly at the present time.

The one great problem before the Jews of the world is how to rescue their remaining coreligionists in Europe before they are all massacred. Already this has happened to 3,000,000 and there are only 3,000,000 left. There is a definite and concrete program through which action can be taken immediately to save a large part of these innocent victims. Until it has been carried out, there should be a moratorium on all disputes over long-range policy.

We do not mean to suggest of course that the rescue of the Jews is a responsibility of the Jewish community only. It is a charge on the conscience of every person in the world who dares to call himself civilized.

Heroines Of The Warsaw Ghetto

By Ben-Dor

Many legends are woven around the heroic exploits of Zivia Lubetkin and Tosia Altman, the two girls who headed the defence of the Warsaw Ghetto. Mention of their names in a cable last week indicated that they had now left the domain of anonymity and need no longer be described as "Z" and "T."

For [illegible] years a handful of Jewish [illegible] in Tel-Aviv and Jerusalem were the only people [illegible] who knew their real names and the extent of their activities in the underground Zionist labour movement. Messages were received from them regularly. When they could not write themselves, friends in neutral countries described their actions until 28th May, when Stockholm cabled: "Tosia and Zivia, as well as members of their family, have lost their lives in the defence of the ghetto." The word "family" was to indicate other Chalutzim.

At the end of 1939, following upon the partition of Poland, a group of Chaluts leaders came together in Russian-occupied Bialystok to discuss the question of strengthening the movement which had been cut into two halves, one half under Russian rule and the other under German rule. Bialystok was near the German border and the little conference was very anxious to establish contact with members of the movement across the border, to help and guide them in their difficult task. A "liaison officer," preferably a woman, was required. The liaison officer had to be brave, capable, ingenious, familiar with the needs of the movement, able to smuggle at the border. Zivia Lubeckin volunteered for the task.

She had been on the list of those for whom a "certificate" for Palestine was available. At that time ten certificates were sent out for the heads of the Zionist movement in Poland who were to travel through neutral Russia. Two of these were to be given to leaders of the Chaluts. Zivia waived her rights to the precious certificate and agreed to go to Nazi-occupied Warsaw.

In Warsaw Zivia soon became the head and heart of Zionist youth movements. All the reports published abroad about Zionist work in Poland really emanated from her. (She was referred to anonymously as "Z.") She seldom wrote herself, for obvious reasons. But in Stockholm and in Geneva they knew her and Tosia, her chief lieutenant. They wrote and reported about the two girls who moved about Poland, daily facing death, daily extricating themselves from the net of the Gestapo. At first, in 1940, and the best part of 1941, during the "lenient" period of Nazi oppression, the Zionist movement was engaged in constructive work. Eighteen months ago Zivia wrote from Warsaw:

"We have only 700 members in Hashomer, on Hachshorah, but if only you knew what efforts it cost us . . . The youth movement had ensconced two seminaries . . . In addition to our usual educational activities for adults we have to build institutions which we would never have expected to come within the sphere of our activity. We founded primary schools and a High School. . . . On our journeys we use the documents of . . . Never before has the Jewish public appreciated our work the way it does today."

Zivia became the central figure, the symbol of the Jewish pioneering movement. She organised soup kitchens for the people of the ghetto, provided relief for refugees from other parts of Europe who had been dumped in Warsaw. At the end of last year she was informed that in view of the present agitation to save Jews of Poland, her name would be placed amongst the first to be rescued.

The underground committee decided that she should go; "Zivia is always in the company of Maves" (death) they wrote abroad. She did not accept the decision, and they said of her that this was the only occasion on which she refused to be bound by a resolution adopted in the Chaluts councils. In a letter to Jerusalem, dated March, 1943, she wrote: "The family is against . . . (here she used a code-word meaning "the removal from Poland of several leading members of the movement.")

Born in Slonim in Poland, she was a graduate of a Hebrew school. At a young age she joined the Chaluts Youth Organisation and later studied in a Chalutz Seminary. From the seminary she went for Hachsharah to Kielce, to the famous Kibbutz Borochov. Although she became the secretary of the Kibbutz she insisted on doing the hardest manual tasks in the settlement.

Tosia was a member of the Hashomer Hatzair. She, too, had crossed the border time and again. In 1940 she was known to be in Vilna. A certificate was waiting for her. She would not use it and returned to her tasks in Warsaw. She was born in Wloclawek, and was an active member of the Shomer organisation. Her last letter said: "I have only one aim — to inform the world that we are being exterminated."

In November last (reports Mr. Dobkin, a member of the Jewish Immigration Department in Jerusalem) a letter was received from a neutral source disclosing that there was a difference of opinion between the older and younger generation in the ghetto on the question whether armed self-defence should be organised. "The young people argued that seeing that they were threatened with death in any case, it was better to die like heroes."

In January a letter from the ghetto stated:

"After long discussion we decided to fight for our lives. Our greetings to you."

On February 6, it was indicated that preparations were being made for the fight. About the same time a member of the movement wrote from Warsaw: "If deportations are renewed, we shall defend ourselves. Zivia, 'B' & 'A' have transferred themselves to another place." It was known that she had been outside of Warsaw in a place of comparative safety but she decided to return to the great ghetto in anticipation of the battle.

Another message, dated February 1, said "Regards from Zivia. She is in Hagana" and a later letter: "I haven't seen Zivia for some time. She is very near death and is better off." The message further said that "on principle" she was against accepting facilities for emigration and that she was making ready for "transfer to the spacious house of Dr. Ruppin, which will be able to accommodate her and her whole family." The hint was obvious. Zivia was making arrangements for armed defence and for a fight from which she knew she would never return alive.

every friday

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without remorse
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an amber."

The day after the Soviet delegates, Lt. Col. Itzik Feffer and Professor Solomon Michoels, and Sholem Asch spoke at the Forum in Montreal the Gazette said: "Louis Fitch, K.C., the chairman, spoke for almost three-quarters of an hour at the opening of the rally before he introduced the other speakers. Later, because of the lateness of the hour, addresses to have been given by Maurice Hartt, K.C., M.L.A., on behalf of Prime Minister Adelard Godbout; Rev. Dr. H. J. Stern, Jerry Rose, representing the Youth Groups, and I. Rabinovitch, editor of the Jewish Eagle, were cancelled."

The next day the Gazette continued at length in a story with the following heads: "Unheard Speeches to USSR Published; Maurice Hartt, K.C., M.L.A., Dr. H. J. Stern and I. Rabinovitch Laud Soviets; Addresses Cancelled; Representative of Premier, Rabbi and Editor Forced from Forum Program by Time Element."

The second account said: "At Tuesday night's Forum assembly of the local Jewish community, held to receive messages from Soviet Jewish delegates who have been touring America, several publicly announced speakers were not called upon for their addresses. This together with the facts that at least one unannounced speaker was called upon, and that the chairman, Louis Fitch, K.C., consumed far more than the prescribed time for his remarks, has given rise to a great deal of inquiry with suggestions from some that the undelivered addresses be secured and published as a means of rounding out the occasion. These suggestions were acted upon by a Gazette reporter and the missing addresses, or what could be salvaged of them, are printed here."

So there is the story of the reception of Feffer and Michoels by about nine thousand people in the Montreal Forum, and it was unprecedented for the Gazette to have continued the subject over into another day. Beautiful flags decorated the platform but Louis Fitch was the world's leading chairman. Beautiful standards of gladioli decorated the platform but Louis Fitch talked too long. Read all about it for it really was the subject of the week. In fairness to Mr. Fitch it must be agreed that he gave till it hurt.

The Gazette reporter undoubtedly sat at the press table, one of the most exposed spots in the whole theatre of operations fighting an all-out battle against the Fascist enemy. It was arranged just below the platform and thus caught him in a gigantic pincers movement between the local dignitaries on the stage and the masses of the common people. If his presence at the press table proved beyond doubt that the Gazette was present, it also trapped him in an inextricable spot far from the momentary relief of a smoke or a coke. However, unlike most of his kind, he had his boss, John Bassett, publisher, with him in the flesh for once, in a fine demonstration of equality of justice fa[illegible]. What one suffered from the chairman and the [illegible]ches in Yiddish the other suffered, only more [illegible] to get worse on the stage than down under [illegible] to get away. At any rate it was apparent later that they had seen eye to eye, and had ached joint for joint.

This column did not mind Mr. Fitch very much, having learned from long experience how to deal with these people. In the first place, this column does not accept press tickets or sit at press tables. It attends en famille with tickets bought for aisle seats as near as possible to an exit. At the meeting intended to honor the Soviet-Jewish delegation, the Forum was filled to capacity so that people seemed to be pasted up under the rafters in a great spread of color. As Mr. Fitch appeared to be revealing every thought he ever could have had on his subject since the Russian Revolution of 1917, this writer's family, always crassly interested in unintellectual things, took to counting the gate receipts.

So many here, so many there, so many paying fifty cents, so many paying a dollar and a half, and added increment based on a rough estimate of seven out of twenty in the upper brackets and three out of twenty in the lower brackets who were seen reading their purchased programs while Mr. Fitch gave forth from an unlimited supply of welcome to the Soviet delegates. This column, unable to add and get the same answer twice, was naturally ineligible for that kind of diversion. So it was either a case of light calisthenics in the lobby or a mental retreat into the gloomy past when Jews had died for lighter offences than talking too much.

The Gazette said that Mr. Fitch as chairman talked for nearly forty-five minutes but, as he seemed to find more and more pages to read from instead of less, this column went back to different countries and to earliest times so that he seemed to be speaking for many centuries: There really is nothing very new about outward demonstrations of anti-Semitism. Hundreds of years ago a Babylonian calif, just like the local political bosses in Quebec City, said: "Tear down no synagogue but permit no new ones to be built." In Egypt Jews once had to wear bells. There is no such thing as a Jewish community which cannot be destroyed. The Jews were expelled from Arabia where they had experienced assassination and many abominations. In the Byzantine Empire (Eastern Division of the Roman Empire) the clergy took a free hand in Jew-baiting. Expulsions, special quarter, [illegible] cemetery, synagogues burned, forced baptisms, [illegible] of Jews whose corpses were thrown into the fire. In South Africa it was hunger, pestilence, being sold into slavery, being put to the sword, suffering continual century-long misery. The Jews had to wear yellow badges away back in Babylonia. That's where they had forced delivery of children to the fire temples, and all kinds of slaughter and violence. In Spain the clergy and the upper classes used to dress up and go to see Jews tormented at the stake and hear their moans and smell the smell of burning flesh.

Mr. Fitch took the cake, of course. And it was a fortuitous circumstance from which good may come. As a fighter for years for what has always looked like the lost cause of fewer speakers and fewer words spoken, this column greets with glee the appearance of a daily newspaper on its side. In time the conscienceless robbers who present distinguished guests to worn-out audiences will diminish as publicity continues against greed and vanity. It will take constant vigilance which it is hoped the Gazette will not relinquish.

There is talk about sending a return Jewish delegation to Russia some day. Mr. Fitch might be a member. If Lt.-Col. Feffer and Professor Michoels are still there and have forgiven him they may give one of those Russian banquets with seventeen courses of caviar and great flagons of vodka. They are forewarned. If the friend from Canada speaks so long as a host just think of what he could do as a guest. f.f.c.

Zionists Carry American Jewish Conference

But Divisions Inside Jewry Remain

The Christian Century says:

By an overwhelming majority, the American Jewish Conference at its recent New York convention adopted a resolution in favor of making Palestine "the (sic!) Jewish commonwealth," demanding withdrawal of the British white paper of 1939 which restricted Jewish immigration and land-holding, and calling for unrestricted Jewish immigration into the Holy Land. In other words, the conference, which claimed to be a democratically chosen body representing all American Jewry, went all-out Zionist.

The effect was somewhat lessened, however, by two incidents. In one, after the conference had voted, Joseph M. Proskauer, former New York supreme court justice and representative of the American Jewish Committee, announced that that body would not be bound by the resolution. In the other, publication of an anti-Zionist statement by the American Council for Judaism brought on that body an attack of almost unparalleled vituperation, with almost equally severe strictures against the New York Times for giving anti-Zionist views space in its news columns.

The council opposed the idea of making Palestine a Jewish state, and declared that it should be given a democratic, autonomous government in which "Jews, Moslem and Christians shall be justly represented." Not content simply to uphold the opposing view, the New York body listened while four rabbis branded signers of the non-Zionist statement as "unsportsmanlike," "impertinent," as guilty of an "attempt to sabotage," of "outrageous action," of "misrepresentation," of "treachery to the cause of Israel," men who had "placed themselves outside the pale of Israel."

With such divisions revealed inside Jewry, and such emotional excess manifested by the majority at any sign of dissent, there is little likelihood that the United Nations will deliberately incur the hazards of trouble with the Arabs at this juncture by adopting the policy demanded in the New York gathering.

BY NEW MEASURE REICH REDUCES JEWS TO MOST INFERIOR STATUS

directed against or in connection with Jews. Once there is no documentary evidence bearing their signatures, these men feel, no charge can be made against them under a different regime.

Financial considerations obviously provide another reason for the ruling. By means of the new decree the Nazi leaders possibly hope to counteract a recent ruling of the United States ordering citizens and residents of this country to list their claims against property and estates in Germany or Nazi-occupied territory.

It also seems that after their wholesale looting of Jewish property by other means the Nazis have issued the new decree to authorize the seizure of any remaining loot that has escaped them.

It is interesting to note that in addition to the article referring to the application of the decree to foreign Jews its authors have devoted an article to the extension of this jurisdiction over the protectorate. This specification calls to mind the case of the Petschek family, prominent Jewish industrialists from Czechoslovakia, as an illustration of the way the Nazi mind is working.

Dr. Otto Petschek, senior of the family and known as Czechoslovakia's "Coal King," died in 1934. In 1938, preceding Germany's seizure of Sudetenland, his heirs sold their vast mining interests in that region to a Czech group. They retained the Prague banking house, Petschek & Co., and chemical and mining holdings outside the Sudeten territory. In March, 1943, the "Reichsanzeiger" listed the names of twenty-nine emigrated members of the Petschek family whose property had been confiscated by the German Reich.

If, for instance, members of that family before their emigration disposed of property or left behind funds to Jewish relatives or friends under the new rule no legal investigation would be made of the death of the beneficiaries.

There need be no prosecution, even in a clear-cut murder case. There would be no legal proceedings whatever, no death certificate or files. The deceased was non-existent under civil and criminal law; his estate would go to the state.

With no files of statements at hand bearing the signature of an official or officials, it will be well-nigh impossible to hold an individual responsible in connection with such a case. Ultimate responsibility however, will rest with Hitler, the Supreme Law Lord, and the signatories of the decree, Wilhelm Frick, Minister of Interior; Otto C. Thierack, Minister of Justice; Lutz Count Schwerin von Krosigk, minister of Finances, and Martin Bormann, Nazi party deputy leader.
